Original publisher's light blue wrappers with title printed within decorative border. 19, [i] (advertisement for another work of Jullien) pp. Text in French. Upper wrapper somewhat worn and soiled. Some browning and wear; occasional light foxing. First Edition. OCLC no. 181898163. Jullien, a French critic and writer on music, "was inspired by history, above all in the first years of his professional musical life, and he wrote many articles and historical essays on the musical life of the 18th century, using unedited archival materials. 'Like others of his colleagues, he contributed to returning the Revue et gazette musicale to the path of serious historical study' (Pougin). Some of these essays were published in his lifetime, collected in volumes. His erudition and his often criticized flowery style were the source of his success; his respect for creators and his appetite for the new meant that he was among the most avant-garde individuals of the musical life of his time." Brigitte Massin in Grove Music Online. $10

86. Rossini, Gioachino. La Cenerentola riproduzione dell'autografo esistente presso l'Accademia Filarmonica di Bologna con introduzione di Philip Gossett. Bologna: Forni, [1969]. 2 volumes. Oblong folio. Full publisher's red cloth with titling in black. Facsimile of the autograph musical manuscript of the full score. Binding very slightly worn and soiled; a little minor staining to edges of first two leaves of Volume I, otherwise in very good condition. A "dramma giocoso" in two acts to a libretto by Jacopo Ferretti after Charles Perrault's Cendrillon and librettos by Charles-Guillaume Etienne for Nicolas Isouard's Cendrillon (1810, Paris) and Francesco Fiorini for Stefano Pavesi's Agatina, o La virtù premiata (1814, Milan), La Cenerentola was first performed in Rome at the Teatro Valle on January 25, 1817. "Rossini wrote La Cenerentola in a little over three weeks in January 1817. As with two earlier comic masterpieces, L'italiana in Algeri and Il barbiere di Siviglia, Rossini and his librettist had important precedents with which to work, enabling a text to be assembled and musical and dramatic perspectives to be calculated in the shortest possible time... [The] opera quickly proved to be enormously popular in Italy and abroad." Richard Osborne in Grove Music Online. Published on the occasion of the centenary of Rossini's death. (29716) $275

"Although Doring is well known and was highly regarded as an expert on classical instruments and bows, his reputation rests mainly on his publications. The first issue of Violins appeared in March 1938, and in October the name was changed to Violins and Violinists; it ceased publication in December 1960. In addition to information on violin performances and performers, the magazine carried detailed and informative essays on classic violin makers of the past; the best known of these were Doring's long articles, which were published in book form as How Many Strads? (Chicago, 1945) and The Guaragnini Family of Violin Makers (Chicago, 1949)." Philip J. Kass in Grove Music Online. A cornerstone of the literature.* (29582) $285
